THE POWER OF ART

"ART IS NOT WHAT YOU SEE, BUT WHAT YOU MAKE OTHERS SEE."
EDGAR DEGAS

Art in all forms is a key ingredient to ZOM Living's approach to real estate development. Innovative design of the physical spaces within our projects is essential, but it is color, texture, furnishings, and art that complete the design equation and stir the emotions of our residents. We constantly stretch our developers, designers, and consultants during the design process, while giving them creative freedom to surprise and inspire.

The benefits are enormous. Surveys by ZRS, our management affiliate, indicate that upon arrival at our projects, two thirds of our future residents have already decided to live there, even before engaging with the leasing team to tour the property. This emotional connection often translates into higher rents. Our project rents and resident retention levels often exceed those of our competitors. Higher rents translate into higher project values, and this has led to a number of record-setting sales. Our projects consistently garner industry recognition as well, with over 170 awards accumulated through the years, including several national Project of the Year honors. Finally, our projects make a lasting contribution to the cultural fabric of the neighborhoods where our residents live and work. We invite you to visit the Gallery section of our website to see examples of the inspired art that add a unique and powerful dimension to the ZOM Living experience.

As we enter 2019, ZOM's business continues to flourish. Muze at Met and Maizon Brickell will debut in Downtown Miami, Azola in West Palm Beach, and Kinstead will open in North Dallas. Union West will open in Chicago, as will Hazel SouthPark in Charlotte in Q1 2020. We will initiate work on several new projects in South Florida this year - a high-rise in Miami, as well as garden projects in Boca Raton and Miami West. ZOM Senior Living will also start work on several projects, including Wellington Bay in the Palm Beach area. We will break ground on Maizon Bethesda in the Mid-Atlantic region, and several new projects are in pre-development in Tampa; Raleigh; Washington, DC; Dallas; West Palm Beach; and Coral Gables.

ZOM Living will continue to focus on project locations that are convenient to work, retail, entertainment, and culture. Favorable demographic trends are delivering a steady flow of new renters into the housing market. These are primarily millennials and retiring baby boomers, both of whom increasingly find rental housing more attractive than homeownership. Aging seniors are also shifting away from traditional "pay in" senior housing models, preferring the flexibility of renting and looking for higher levels of service and lifestyle amenities.

We are committed to building further on the confidence that our shareholders and capital partners have placed in us. We look forward to the year ahead, and to sustaining ZOM Living's tradition of delivering well-conceived, design-driven living spaces.
